

Every member of the family is skill-free by construction, so any rejection is a false one. Holm controls multiplicity but not dependence: on row-level p-values from a correlated panel its family-wise error reaches well over half, while the identical procedure applied to session-aggregated p-values is correct. The bootstrap corrections are mildly liberal but never fail.